

Figure 124—PPDU structure

9. PHY service specifications

9.1 Overview

The PHY provides an interface between the MAC sublayer and the physical optical channel. The PHY conceptually includes a management entity called the PLME. This entity provides the layer management service interfaces through which layer management functions may be invoked. The PLME is also responsible for maintaining a database of managed objects pertaining to the PHY. This database is referred to as the PHY PAN information base (PIB).